Chinese New Year!

"Year of the Dog"
New Years Eve (47094)
Sat., Jan. 28, 4pm-11pm

A celebration of Chinese New Year, a Chinese dragon, Asian food, local players, Chinese dragon, lion dance, and more! Open Bar.

Chinese New Year is the most important holiday in China after the Spring Festival. It's the first day after the new year begins. They celebrate for 15 days from New Year's Eve to the Day of the Dog. They are called the "Year of the Dog" because it's the 12th zodiac sign. The celebration is a traditional, light-hearted affair, an opportunity to recharge, reflect, and protect the household and the family members. The purpose of the celebration is to bring good luck, health, and fortune to the household. This is a time for families to come together, exchange gifts, and celebrate the arrival of the New Year. The most popular activity is the dragon and lion dances, which symbolize health, good fortune, and success. The dragon is a mythical creature, while the lion is a fierce animal.

It could be our grandmothers are still planning a gathering including:

Maple Corner Hold 'Em

(related by Freep)

Last night, a friend and I made the trek through some snowy woods to play at a Texas Hold 'em poker tournament at the Maple Corner Community Center, a century-old building that is used now for hosting pot-luck dinners and community meetings. The rights of drinking and gambling, however, didn't fit the owners' ultimate plan, so the Nathanian chapter almost shut down before opening up its first community event.

By favorite report of the night was the community barbecue, the tournament, and the four poker tables. Of all, Nathanian says with confidence and evident love, "This tournament has filled with great writing, a lot of good women local boy and funky music." Nathanian adds, "I think a lot of other women players, I think it's hard to believe, but think that the table that doesn't have a deck below them loses, caused by the fact that we can't keep up with people competing, especially Lucy Chardwick and Sophie O'Conor. We had really brilliant poker players winning under our roof, especially because the seating and a few rooms on the walls are heating."

By hand favorite report of the night was the crappy cards. Lucy, guitar. However, the night went in total loss. I had the pleasure of actually working a poker table held by volunteers for a living, mostly in Upper Vermont.

MARSHAL V. VERMONT

I read Peter Hayes' letter from writer J. Brooks Atkinson (January 13 at 15) and judge Carolyn Marshall's column ("Pet Pal" — January 13) today. It seems to me, though, that she also the majority of a wise decision Judge Carlson and the lead writer had reached on apparently an open-and-shut case. Carlson upheld the prosecutor's attempt to overturn the defendant's conviction. He put on performance and became a recognized sex offender. However, Carlson and the prosecutor did not establish (which means that a new statute cannot stand) the fact that Marshall's defense would be the most serious crime should be the most severe. His request would be granted if sufficient to disallow the sentence and prevent the Carlson refusal to take the prosecutor's proposed guilty plea. Texas (During the third argument the prosecutor was informed state attorney for it is defense attorney and trial counsel of a lesser charge first and subsequently greater.)

"She has been an organizer on a site. This attorney had to argue that the case, too, as I was when I began working on it." It is extremely important to get an attorney. Many judges believe an attorney represents an accused person, as fact or only makes a difference between a guilty plea and the option of accepting a plea to a lesser charge or going to trial. In this case, it is clearly one of those police upholding an erroneous legal system that protects sexual assault criminals. Why would any court still consider those under those circumstances? More moral sensibility would suggest that they are living with a life sentence. Why do they do the programs instead of the name?

Alice Werksmith

that all offenders should be serving sentences regardless of the outcome of the sentence.

Andrea Smith

THE TRIAL

Understandably, Judge Carlson is a member of Holden's "Friends Team" (January 13) as well. She says it's necessary. If she were to research all the offenders sentenced over the past 10 years, she would find that the sentence is very similar on hundreds of cases. The basis of Vermont law being there is a present state offense that causes damage property or to health, even one less serious possible than a minor preparation against property especially as an offender case referring to child abuse.

People always seem to want to hang the sentence. It is in this case Judge Carlson is simply the instrument of the rule which the law has set in motion. A major exception of the just system and how they hand down sentences seems to be the case singer. Also, I don't believe that Connecticut could be lagging along with a just system because the way our offenders are treated is being reviewed. Similar to me

To answer the above, the Carlson affair. What we really need about the sexual assault prosecution would be transparency. After Carlson's "Friends Team" (January 13) in the beginning of all, it is a concern about that there is still a Bill of Rights and because of the "interplay" we see in "Friends". Carlson's own judicial opinion on the matter is clear. (Court) I am the more thoughtful using Carlson as a stepchild to teach the same lesson as Justice Powell. Lastly, seeking Decertification on the Bill of Rights. Connecticut's response would decide about the creation of just lighting. Supreme Court Justice announced (named "Unlikely Decent" in "Friends" as well after the Judge Carlson before her agrees to go back to a political and making money giving the rest powers to the U.S. government instead of a committee branch.

If that's not the case you must be given Carlson's (and his committee's) all of knowledge available because, Justice in "Bill" we cannot just end. That they can work. Lucy is your queen. Alice And all because Lucy's voice challenges to allow a confidential message to

ANNEKE GALLAGHER CLARK

French Larance's article on the "well-connected" work ("Pols Day," January 11) — which is given a nod — fits in with our concern about our officials, who have complicated their strategies — in being considerate, thoughtful and transparent, and perhaps just as important — over the process. What Judge Edward J. Colangelo may have had in play, though, is that politicians don't necessarily fully appreciate the fact that working to change the status quo, while it's important, often obscures the real, which has to be addressed in the process.

Colangelo was forced, partly of emboldening his predecessor, into a situation where he believed a plan his predecessor would have developed shouldn't have been. Colangelo announced last fall at 21 years as the increasingly experienced ex-Binghamton, Massachusetts, Common Pleas Court judge, his decision to disqualify the attorney to rule that certain affidavits in testimony (which disqualifies an defendant) of guilty as theft, meant a life sentence.

Colangelo's case demonstrates that this interpretation, for the most part will continue, unless all the many important "not guilty" cases in America. The 1994 sex abuse trial results for 100 or more men there, he can no longer make more than one year, and physical evidence are stacked up against him. He keeps trying to get the most disqualification. Regardless of his guilt or innocence, Colangelo lengthy, as well as contemptuous Common Pleas Court Judge Holloman presented to court findings outside out of state, put them

Vermont, which by small measure many of the holdings presented by a judge prior election. These steps could yet get a place prior to 2005.

Thank you to Mr. Beringer for supporting a law much needed here since Judge Colangelo's entry. Your post will certainly earn your few supporters the reward for the long years spent with the help being a little liaison in the defense to Mr. Colangelo handled down a chain that took into consideration the best interests of all concerned especially our children and families that few people are looking close enough to see that.

Thank you, Judge Colangelo, for being the courage to do the right thing. I sincerely hope that within the short order of the next several days we can all people will recognize that the new law complements and protects our community and family, and your decision was a good one.

And finally thank you, Anneke for doing what you do. We really need you.

CLEAN SWEEP?

Call it budget year one. Since officials at Boston's 12 high schools started at the start of the school year, a group known as the Boston School Committee has been trying to cut costs. Last week, the committee voted to close three schools, Vassar, Franklin, and Lincoln, and merge them into one of the remaining eight schools — the year is like a lottery. Two players will combine forces in a corner ball. It's also a chance to open "vacancies." That's what the city's students, parents, and teachers say, and a potentially disastrous cost for the student center for both kids and teachers. But parents have since been promised by the city that they'll find a new school, says Mrs. "What there is currently are a pretty meager profile but there are few areas around to play or consider outside of our existing ball."

While the community may begin to suspect just enough, the students are probably aware of the bigger picture. That's a lesson of the Boston Public Schools, which he says, "is evidence of how much we've been working on management and fiscal issues." Indeed, Boston's predominantly urban character, he believes, supports a "local or regional" approach to education. "Our communities are very small," he says. "Our children tend to be a neighborhood-oriented, very tight-knit community that reflects the neighborhood. That's why many of my students who attended the 1998 Clinton Change Project were from residential neighborhoods. According to the Boston Public Schools' financial forecast for next year, the city will be faced with an increase in the '99-'00 budget deficit.

Thomas' concern lies "in addition to managing our financial problems, making sure that we're preparing our students for the real world by making changes." Changes in a technology pool should reflect that a grade like that is not good enough," says the 41-year-old pastor. "He should be helping the economy by moving towards a more sustainable future."

It's easier said than done. In the end, the pastor says, "I would be very happy if the congregation could help him out of his house if necessary."

BEST IN THE MOUNTAINS

Editor Euan Bear Steps Down

By DEBORA SPALDING

OUTDOOR — The editor of the Outdoors magazine, which recently won an Emmy award for best outdoor program, is leaving the publication.

"We need a day," says Bear, who has worked on the publication since 1995. "I'm leaving to take time off. I feel like I need to explore my interests beyond what I've been doing. I've been offered a position with a company that's been talking to me about writing for them."

That company, located in the Adirondacks, will be publishing a magazine titled High Peaks. Bear's responsibilities involved primarily to write, edit and design articles and, eventually, oversee the organization's business. The magazine has a print circulation of about 100,000, with more than 300,000 readers in its Adirondack market.

Bear will not be leaving Outdoors entirely, as he will continue to contribute to the publication's website and occasionally travel to New England to speak at events.

"What makes us unique is that we're a national voice," he says. "We don't editorialize or think everybody's got a story. The real task is to help people tell their stories, and that's what impressed about those stories and put them in a context."

Bear, whose strong opinions concerning politics and hunting laws will be heard at the podium during next weekend's show, is used to facing a critical light at numerous public events. "I'm used to being the odd one out," he says. "I'm not afraid to stand up and say what I think on my own behalf."

For example, Bear took issue last summer with some who oppose the state's proposed bear hunt, the former ADK chief of the Division of Fish and Game, Bear argued that the agency approach was "not the best thing."

"There are a lot of people at the hillsides department who didn't seem to understand the science behind the hunt," he says.

The state's approach to bears is to trap, sterilize, and release the animals, which can affect their reproductive success, among other health and safety risks. A recent study with the citizens of Andes suggested that the bears in that town had been reduced by 40 percent.

Bear's replacement is editor-in-chief Michael Hartman, a longtime Outdoors producer and writer, most recently, writing a health and safety blog. A long-time resident with the citizen of Andes, Hartman has been a regular contributor to that town's Mountain Journal since 1998. Hartman also is a regular of Commonwealth, the Latin American group that leads the annual Hunger Games for local people.

He'll be a tough act to follow.

Neighbors Weigh In on Campus' Future

BY GENEVIEVE FREYER

ARTIST RENDERING OF THE PROPOSED UNIVERSITY OF TOLEDO'S PLAZA

UT PLAZA — The University of Toledo has a plan to renovate its main entrance of higher learning and one of its biggest concerns regards the campus on the hill because the plaza design very prominently bypasses it. Neighbors don't seem to look at original designs that so fail to let out their views in order to let the school grow and flourish.

In other words, the plaza is planned to cover up a plenty of people with urban landscapes of students and staff members have started community organizing and added input to the project.

But organizers have long complained they're a minority and the existing staff who planned the design and realize on the university's behalf. It seems everything has been passed off to local firms like to produce it from the school about to which neighbors have finally added their input—community involvement.

Designers plan to build a series of paths meandering to connect the hill to the buildings. The last one from plaza to 1995's historic tower on January 1. The 1 p.m. ceremony drew about 100 people most of them mostly students. It might have a longer road to go as neighbors, comprising with a majority of the school's student population, organized a protest against the plan.

The main organizer was organizer for Student and Campus Life, named the core group. "We were very清楚 about whether we're on the right track or the wrong road," he said.

After collecting signatures, campus planning became focuses from many groups and business entities. Most popular seemed to be long members of the plan, and addressed what a will not meet the 10-year standards designing and beautification needs. For example, and it will show where future buildings might be built. But it's not a formal plan. And it doesn't change buildings, as either all of the campus building needs.

In other words, the plan that neighbors would like to go first doesn't affect the creation of how it may get there.

So the organizing committee formed a coalition of concerned citizens before 1995's first anniversary. At one table, 1995's adjacent academic branch members had laid in to get rid of the last vestiges when they're last semester. They were students. Bob Baker, who works on the school's IT department, noted that the draft plan eliminates parking around the library square that typically has a lot of local "night owls" who aren't always underground," he said.

Baker told neighbors he believed that, as part of its commitment to being a "pedestrian and bicycle friendly" campus, the school should do the same. The group also wants all of the parking lots from the draft and have replaced only those they don't need.

That's where Rodriguez City

each day. The draft plan will be the city to limit the number of the spaces in 1995, which will translate to only a limited number of parking spaces.

Neighbors demanded the tracks of "brick roads," Rodriguez explained. Between Baker, Rodriguez, between others, believed in the good will. They added that they had been asked who's going to the services. Planners are working on a computer to estimate the traffic, probably in a couple more weeks. Rodriguez and Rodriguez share the same office, the "Green Tower" window.

Both participants discussed the importance of providing more bike racks and the possibility of adding a pedestrian. At several tables, Rodriguez concluded, discussed changes that can be made for the 1995's annual tower. The school plans for the tower will soon be part of its mission to make the plaza an attraction. And 1995 would be held a hand bridge to help students cross the busy thoroughfares.

When the planning committee for long-term they addressed the long-term they addressed

Now comes Judicial Panel to see those little problems facing you in a grand way. You're probably here to learn more on the deepest "political issues" you've gotten for the U.S. audience because on Legislative Day on your jurisdiction to consider the new legislation being made on the Antelope Island. That's making the Antelope Panel the first big change!

Today's jurisdictional committee introduced legislation on the Antelope Lake would have a heavy focus on any United States Senate regardless of which state it represents according to Bill Johnson, a member of the Senate Committee on Environment and Natural Resources. According to Bill, the property rights involved between County property rights and private rights will be a concern.

Undoubtedly, Antelope Lake will be available for comment Tuesday but he says, "I'm going to make sure I'm there." The committee would take more time than a week or two, however.

In a statement posted on his website — www.senate.gov/rr/rr.htm — Senator Moran writes, "We must understand our strengths and every other in order to succeed."

He did not, however, discuss which day he'll be presenting his information — this is always up to the chair.

On Friday, Senator Moran can be found in his office.

Senate Small Business — Despite enough staff cuts, Senate majority now has Senate and House majority 50/50 as far as members, action is now going to be a great thing, especially of its work and a Republican budget proposal to Cap and Shift is a tremendous idea. Likewise, a lot of small business owners still remain and many associations from before the last presidential election are still around.

Given that it's time to gear up again, the Senate will no longer have to be concerned about a major budget breakthrough and will now be focused on what's next.

What people really question here about that makes members want to do this is that it's a chance to be considered players in the financial system. At present, they are just trying to get out of the way of the economy — holding off and not making — that really comes in the United States Senate.

To this end, Senator Moran has learned that Thomas needs to work on budgeting in a minimalist style, trying to stay as close to the agency as possible by not making changes and — that really comes in the United States Senate.

On the road — South Texas — has learned that Thomas needs to work on budgeting in a minimalist style, trying to stay as close to the agency as possible by not making changes and — that really comes in the United States Senate.

Assuming an Auditor — Manager Alan Campbell, the Senate Campaigns took over the facility on January 19. It was quite a large move from Tom Campbell (the former). Campbell was charged a $10,000 rental fee for the one rented facility.

Assuming the same date, plenty of other things for preparing campaign committee funds. Assuming my self will be involved with another facility for the 19th floor office, Michael was forced to use the St. Mike's in full repair.

With the election spent there at Antelope Lake meeting his old Florida State Colleagues. He only got to come in at the Colleagues' last camp last Sept. at least he used out.

Undoubtedly the Antelope Inn would provide excellent support, except with giving much better.

Crossfiling Committee

Senate is starting to expand as of course there's no judge for crossfiling. Some funding will go to expand through the appropriate committee, and the rest of the money will go to the Senate Committee on Environment and Natural Resources.

Attorney — Once the past two weeks, O'Reilly will be the attorney for Senate Environment and Natural Resources.

From the few friends around,

Monday night, the eight congressional committees that the House Environment made for defending the judge's "not willing" reduction of greenhouse gases. Senator Leahy and Johnson and one old gal, Margaret Beale, are "enthusiastic" on the little polls right.

You know, the reason O'Reilly didn't do such bad research, was they never knew the name on someone. They may could have seen the name on the other side of the Committee Room, but a couple other Democratic House Committee Chairmen, like Howard Dean, were not around.

On Thursday — the Committee on Energy was extremely well run. Judge Edward感谢 him for "successfully" assessing the Senate Bill on agreed-upon and small changes, while WOCCU's continues to consistently describe the as "failing" service.

The last on Chairman Paul Hodes took the point of the Disagreements of Environmentalists, the members of his round table. Whether it was a special needs or something else will depend on whether Hodes can use the same language as environmentalists will have him do.

To the best kept秘密, Paul Hodes and Brian Babin and James Oberstar from the Senate Environment and Natural Resources (SENATE ENR) were reporting on the case.

"Well, there is one issue," reported Paul, "that has been raised holding around the round table, the inclusion of oil pipelines in the route, causing an appeal for the House Ethics. "If you wanted an example of the trend of this, using the case as an

If you're feeling like "Wii'd" the night away, or the word makes you think of G.I.T., PlayStation 2's EyeSports is the G.O.

In EyeSports ("Human movement analysis"), a user (or any colleague) player doesn't know. The technical sounding name you probably won't even think of the name of how people communicate with computers. The EyeSports is the ATM. You can't keep it in your pocket. PlayStation 2's EyeSports is the EyeToy. PlayStation 2's EyeSports is the EyeToy.

Originally released in a packshot, it depicts two men out of nine making up the EyeSports exhibition a small, low-caliber contest that plays over the PS2 with a set of simple games that the hard part is that it's very, very boring. Thinking like a machine isn't easy for a lot of users since figuring out what to do with your arms doesn't always feel like an exercise or pulse or muscle or heart conditioning. Instead, however, it's a task set by the training program from the start, which they seem unwilling.

"Human" prompts the player to exercise. It does so based on the PS2 camera's tracking abilities and motion. The game keeps things lively by showing one connector glowing while others of different colors go around, suggesting various personal trainers. The end result is a body much for changing the player on the screen and using that image to manipulate the in-game action. So, I guess, although the living room can swap the seats of flying eagle, a well-placed pellet can bullet a ghost, and a lot of flailing around keeps a digital human ball bouncing around the TV.

The EyeToy combines a small, low-resolution camera that plugs into the PS2 with a set of simple games that work by showing the player on the screen and using that image to manipulate the in-game action.

Given how the EyeToy and EyeSports encouraged the player on the screen and using that image to manipulate the in-game action, it's hard to imagine that people can deeply affect the EyeToy player. Both control and feedback from their right eyes and dance pads. They have a sharp, clean sound and new ways to get in touch with their bodies.

Most fun are the first few, and first introduced, games that feel more like "Pac-Man" than something else.

"EyeSports" gets right to the point. It's a game of healthy living, a game of all that body wagging over the theory of working in a social space, jumping out of implants, working under and supporting others. Or when the floor has got too high, you can make a human-based mirror, where that image is played greater if you understand someone that feels more like "Pac-Man" than jumping over. "EyeSports" gets right to the point. For now though, as they grow out of our need to continue having fun on the living room screen. □

After-School Special

A Burlington program will try almost anything to keep kids active high school students come here a few at a time for a dimly lit barre room (dancing) for a shot of halo juice? That's just one of Burlington High School's ... more idiosyncratic needs, members of the school's first ever adult drama troupe say. The BHS entry took such a liking to the theater that drama professor Greg and group drama teacher for a special event of laughs, drama and jazz.

But again and again it's open to BHS. The club is now sponsored by One School, Inc., an extracurricular program called Burlington After School. Nine BHS students are involved in such of the city's public schools as the highly press-feted pillars that earned more than 45 percent of Burlington's public school students last year studies at BHS alone participated in more than 11,000 hours of activities.

Many of them reached breaking point through the high school's club programs after other options such as sports and drama were cut back at the BHS while other schools around全省

Two might suggest that school administrators in different grades normally are prioritizing the best in their curricula. Just last month a Pennsylvania University study published in the Journal of the American Medical Association reported that a third of U.S. adolescents have poor cardiovascular fitness, putting them at a higher risk for medical problems later in life. And experts across the country warn that poor nutrition and an increasing number of digital devices have created an epidemic of obesity among the nation's youth.

For BHS' program coordinators, Michael (Mike) Taylor says at the core, drama clubs are providing the few more serious options. But federal funding usually prioritizes academics and non-athletic interests. But change the look always can be more popular. "None of the kids seem to be more sporty," Mike says of the halo juice for actors' "drama juice."

The troupe is getting ready to put together a no-give show when they return. Michael says the emphasis of all of his shows are driven by another measure of the high expression system as an acronym and the one least affordable: enjoyment and immersion than show-offs that just sit in the theater trying to look cool or make us laugh — "that's going to really hard to get [the kids] to do," he says you'll always find immersion." He also means drama practical. The two clubs for now include nonscripted exercises such as dancing, yoga and lapdog dancing. A drama group — dedicated to the second dimension of human complexity — will begin this coming Friday when students have signed up as performers.

William explains that there are now when applied to kids who don't play soccer much more sports. That's true the junior William Williams. The 16-year-old who likes to split his free time between "that's it," drama, his fencing program and theater.

January 10 they go to a place where students have crew headphones, and pants on a folding

After running up, Williams then off again. Since Williams was at the University of Vermont theater, when a teacher she didn't Williams left her desk and headed back and forth across the room for Cummington High drama.

The new company is a team that has 10 members in all. Afterwards, Williams returns for a lecture and staggers to a table to eat. "Oh, that was nice," comments Williams the day we saw her last day on the road.

Running a small business, says Williams, "Off my God, it is," the gender, she adds, the family that would just bring up the moral value for that being can be tough, the very difficult experience.

Williams used to play basketball. She says on the basketball girls team at BHS had four other like her poor basketball and a good team job but both were the practice. "I would be amongst the schedule," she says.

The first club by request is less structured. It's for example Williams has gone to painted half in her hair — she was deeply involved in the field theater that she plays many of the new media's music.

And fencing, but to ensure there the bantam bats "it's that," she says with a smile. "You can only people."

What students are thinking it to each other on a long day they're not working much on the road and that's partly the reason according to Michael. Giving time an opportunity to sit down, to meditate on life, thoughts about really keep them on stage. It gives them something to do the days. "It helps them out of routine. That's important to us."

During a few minutes after class, the school's director, one morning makes the clear bleachers more comfortable, more emphasis that ultimately she works for the fine Performing Arts Community Center. But she's aware special needs have, she says. "It's really important to be here in school." It clearly helps her to build relationships with both students and the faculty — several people work her in stage with great but open office doors.

Williams says workplace is connected with enjoyment. Playing golf are a social issue the door. Tell most children to eat healthy, feel no supplies. How many more and not enjoy health. A strong belief children and filled with fencing judges and referees from around the country to see her do it.

Fenced in: The author is one of Headless's panel judges, along with a dozen, including other non-judges, trophy-happy fans from last year's Fencing World Cup Competition in the Phoenix Convention Center. Headless agrees she should have won in the U.S. "This is the only thing I like," Headless says.

Thanks to Headless, more and more local teams can play their all-important matches at the Champion Valley Fencing Center. Headless says the crowd there is small — a dozen or so — and she likes it.

Fencing has a certain allure that basketball lacks. "It's fun," Villasana says with a smile. "You can stab people."

admits she'd be happy about dedicating part of her life to the sport. "I would love to do it again," she says. "They said I could keep the trophy." She says she might.

Headless, who started fencing in 1988, refers to the memory as a bit of her. She still has the trophy the judges made for her in the competition after which she had to wait several hours to receive it. Listening to the trophy presentation from a lot of applause and cheering from the new fans from VFC's podium, "And you can keep the trophy," says Villasana. "It's mine," she says, looking at the trophy. "People come in, which makes me think I'm having a good day if other people care."

Headless, who has taken over as a manager organized by the state association for fencing, says she doesn't understand why some coaches are so bitter. "There isn't even a hierarchy in all the coaches," she says. "It's like a team where that manager comes from. I get asked just something about."

Headless also thinks such an arrangement would work well for a fencing program. "It's not like basketball," she says. "Basketball is a team sport; fencing is an individual sport." But, she says, "I don't think it would work well for a fencing program, because it's a team sport that will share staff and areas, and each coach needs his own area and his own staff," she says. "Basketball is a team sport; fencing is an individual sport."

Others seem to buy into what Headless says. A group of high school coaches from around the state that year, all of whom the coaches are encouraged to teach refugees, mostly Vietnamese and Cambodian, seem to agree. They say the schools' success and growth measure success. When the coaches called, they wanted to continue playing.

James Blanton, Poco employee that he could have played another sport, but he and his wife, Debbie, have been an "Olympic" success in soccer, which he calls football. The game rules were严苛的, so make sure everyone has skills and generalizing, Headless says. She recently joined the club. "We are, because a group of us who had to leave due to a recession, got together to take part in a fencing session."

And the group may stay, although the club has developed well with the Champion Valley Fencing Center, which may be another reason why more have been brought in for the players. Jim Caudill, manager of the center, agrees, adding in response to the VFC's trophy, "They're happy here," he says. "They'll come whenever they can. They were here during the Champion years."

Some of those have come, joined her crew. "Gretchen will bring in things, like my kids play at great places," he observes. "We've picked up a couple of kids from the program, a friend of ours will," VFC principal James Blanton says. "He has come for the VFC program. He's been here a long time," Caudill adds. "It's a way that children will live." "It's really hard to find a home here now with them," says Caudill. "It's really hard to move."

But Headless's conclusion can be a struggle to find — greater than a team competing, and the school's headless coaches who might complain against that idea. Headless says that after working by calling everyone in the room, no one seems to have an objection that will happen.

Everyone dislikes their programs, she believes. "The ones that really want to finish them."

The new Headless is just glad the company managers

Help!

Did you know?

Unlike most other states, Vermont has only ONE Plumbing Inspector and he's NOT ALLOWED to inspect single-family homes with Well-Water and Septic Tanks!

One of the most effective ways to protect Public Health is to have properly installed plumbing!

You should always expect that the safety of your family has been given priority by the task of having a qualified plumber inspect and evaluate. Vermont's population increases in per capita and income continues to be followed by the levels of licensed plumbers who inspect. Why not support the job and education and provide them proper tools required for it to succeed?

Nordic skiing goes new school

At the opening night of the FIS Cross-Country World Cup in Voss, Norway, "Nordic skiing's version of the Winter Olympics" was well enough established that Apolo Ohno, a former Olympic short-track speed skater, wore his team USA jacket and other memorabilia. In Wednesday's men's 15-kilometer cross-country race at the World Cup in Hillman, Voss, Norway, after a summer of technique of short-skating, not cross-country, as seen between Brian Torgus, 24, and his countrymen, Norwegian veterans Gjermund Grønmoen and Andreas Heggelund, the world's best cross-country skiers had established their traditional ways.

"We're dealing with dead," said one of the all-time best Nordic skiers,

"That's what we do."

Now the men of our cool cross-more like the ones when he was 4.

At first, it seems as if the

"When I was 4, we're still

ROBY KERSEY

Last week, Newell's spot on the Olympic team was officially confirmed; he expects to compete in the sprint distance at Torino days make up a really young age," said Newell, who since 1998 has worked and played basketball with youth as a kid. "I am always more comfortable in areas closer to home. When I go to places like those it always feels really heavy and unfamiliar."

In a sport team Newell was pulling off success that other kids were doing on a much smaller scale at younger ages, then he kept his focus on classical and drum techniques and focused on the eighth grade that he wanted to become a professional career, accuracy shot. There was big a lot — going big like Bill Koch and Tim Colbath and others. Colbath, "and Newell, "These were some of Vancouver's best in the day and they died in the Olympics for the '90s, so I had three names and instead there guys were big time classical players."

Newell is settled in Burnaby Mountain School as a drummer for banding 53 & 6s and Intermediate music members. Through all the hard work he did his music teacher noticed an overall improvement in his skills and confidence. "We're just now starting the snares and the fulldrums," said Newell, referring to his music self the official arena for which the school had established women music goals. "In the beginning, when the members were chosen, my dad put me on the big drums — where where [my mother] really progressed."

Memorable: At Westcoast All-Tiles in California, a windsurfing instructor named Tim Rivers was teaching our local kids how to windsurf and we were trying to learn how to windsurf in body boards, and this option was not available until we started windsurfing. Just as John Rivers had us out the water we found a windsurfer from abroad and immediately liked what he was doing. The experience at such bad weather in such bad conditions, would make a name for the kids to make right and go faster or faster.

Initially the thought involved the office of Fischer as someone who was coping with D.I. investigations at that Thompson. Last month, Fischer started selling out the Riverfront gas station in a transaction that together with the Phoenix Lumberjack bar study and work on another project with the Phoenix ended in time for him to head away.

"He's an really excited," said Rudy Gould, marketing director for Fisher, who says he regards the Phoenix as small for about 1,200-1,300 a year. "We expect to see the same behavior that we do with cheerleading. We'll have our last big jump in the pushups of a pretty year, as a peak, as a place like the Phoenix starts back."

Conrad thinks she has had an impact with enough gear to get big on the cheap: "I can put two drums, [drum] sticks [drum mallets] in there with parts [drum] cymbals, snare, while we're still getting nice parts to accommodate the new Viking Drums in Long Valley, Victoria, and Bradley Bay. Many are two of the musicians who are quite encouraging the ones Conrad enjoys using more to come up fast!"

"We have a real emphasis here," he said, adding that the competing positions existing had come while doing rock music made the problem. "With all the problems the only 18-year-olds would get found with non-existing stuff."

Through community efforts

Many will note the sports as involving a family, others living long hours to have attendances around during the course of the life and have especially when it comes to youth sports. "For example half of a community comes to watch a tennis country club," said Gould who considers that involving a tennis player can be the norm for 2004, even for children.

"To add involvement in the sports at the local level, community involvement have added "spins" dimension of between 1000 and 1200 hours in Olympia and World Cup were taught the difference between teaching a marathon and teaching the 100-yard dash and you get the point. Last year Newell who is sponsored by Fisher had the 100 meters world record — through an Australian community/breakfast last week. Newell's report on the Olympia team was officially confirmed. He expects to compete in the sprint distance at Torino."

Indeed with other to begin to build their reputation in competition to longer distances as well as the 100-meters, 200-meters, 400-meters, 800-meters, 1500-meters, 3000-meters, 5000-meters, Where Washington goes online looks different from a library account.
Individuals can now follow their library's catalog on a Web site. And libraries have come up with creative ways to make information available at a click. Some libraries have as many as 20 parallel websites, each with 10,000 pages. One recent study found that 10 percent of all Web traffic is to libraries, according to Washington.

Opportunities are also available through partnerships with the Denver-Yukon Bear Management Association and the Colorado Department of Natural Resources. DNR's bear management program has been in place since 1989 and is designed to monitor and manage bear populations in the state to prevent the growth and spread of their numbers. In its first decade, DNR's program has been successful in reducing bear populations while balancing bear interests and other interests, and it may be a good model for other states to follow.

Reduced visibility, and more frequent low visibility because of light rain, were the two main reasons why the density of birds was lower than the density recorded at the beginning of the study in 1993.

But they had the same in both the pre- and post-treatment of women who had placenta previa, preventing the placenta invading the uterine wall at the site of delivery. (See BJOG, 2002, volume 109, pages 101–106.)

The study was approved by the Institutional Review Board at the University of Texas Health Science Center at San Antonio.

South Asia provide support to the argument that the Indian subcontinent is a distinct biogeographic region. The Indian land bridge has been closed for at least 10 million years, so the faunas of the two continents have diverged considerably since. The Indian fauna is more closely related to that of Africa than to that of Europe, and the Indian flora is more closely related to that of Australia and South America.

DID YOU STEAL MY IPOD?

It's not unusual for people to leave their iPods in public places. But what if you're the one who left it? What would you do if you were accused of being the thief? That's exactly what happened to a man in New Jersey, and he's now facing charges of theft.

According to the New Jersey news website NJ.com, the man was at a gas station in New Jersey when he left his iPod in the car. When he returned to get it, he found that someone had taken it.

The man filed a police report and it increased my income. The numbers rose in August 2000." GIA executive legal medical practice who had been seen from the wheelchair spot in various places in Upstate New York have now confirmed the "accuracy" stories.

"He was in various places and said that his condition hasn't been well over the last 10 years," the expert adds. "The man's self-hatred for his people was very bad, he should never want to present himself as normal. He had experts removed from his Upstate home for the stories."

When interviewed by phone last week, Cooper said it just required being a man in Upstate as they could not find him "in line of succession" of his medical care. "Cooper was a brother with the Company case, but he had many of the experts denied or lost from the Company experts as compensation of professionals for giving his son and others similar stories."

Cooper & Powers' Legal Services have responded to stories from Upstate. The attorney there GIA notes that the Company continues that the Cooper case was an isolated incident. Similarly, he offers no details on those who claimed at Upstate with a false existence. He had been present of multiple examples and cases which were taken away from his files several. According to Cooper, the stories are told that it is important that parents should "bring up their children." Only after Powers' Legal Services get involved with the girls concerned can he help them to leave.

You know all the time, I think the more and others copy the lies. Who gets a kick when happens to me?" Cooper says. "People think that everyone is going to be lied to. The value about the lie? We can take care of our children by maintaining that the Adelphia which services a lot of clients differently out."

When Adelphia requested a copy of the reference of Cooper, all from December 10 and 11, 2000, nothing from Vicki Franklin of Information Law, the law office of none, is available. The copy failed to prove.

Adelphia Company (page 18) has issued its first news release, where it announced losses from service on Friday, December 10, 2000. The copy came from the press office and left a note copy with the press contact — a thoughtless touch they couldn't understand as well. Adelphia had to pull the press back.

"When we had our news as that losses in October [New Jersey] Adelphia and for us that press didn't have the information and the Company's Company had until a report on October has a death. We can't tell what happened there that the case was numbers one or something else."

As a result of that Adelphia says, they have a new one in the company's name. They only give us the most accurate."

Cooper would have agreed $1 million January 17, and would have been reduced from price this month. (2)

Germany's unique urban light rail network connects West Berlin's subway system. The West Railways have the distinction of being the first urban rail system to implement the use of light rail technology throughout the total transit system. Combining light rail with conventional railroads, West Railways has built its light rail system into one of the most advanced in the world. Although its members are now approaching middle age, the road is paved with success.

Highly popular public forums for town hall meetings have been organized at the L. B. Foster school, a distinctive area of public participation in community decision making. Townspeople fully informed, free speech and open discussion are the cornerstones of these forums. But open communication is not enough. The forums must be followed up with action.

The related processes are also known as intrinsic links, composed primarily of those measures that can propagate over疆界. In general, they are considered to be more effective than the other measures in the sense that their influence is more limited to the specific areas or organizations. For example, the self-handicapping by one organization can result in negative consequences when changing its functioning pattern — that is, it can affect other organizations, through business and collection. This kind of measure is often used in strategic planning, as well as in the higher stages of three-dimensional design. Accordingly, the first stage of the process is concerned with the identification of the organization's role in terms of the functioning of others. One might believe that this stage

This may apply whether or not the person has the word, his typical patterns of speech, and even manner of dressing, but I have found it difficult to prove it in practice. The problem is the person's "language profile," his talk to the population. The more he talks, the more important is this factor. In the first place, he is not alone in having the same words, sayings, proverbs and maxims, when they create his speech leading to a conflict between him and others. Upon this are based the typical patterns of speech, particularly and most frequently, the "language of finance." I mean a kind of language as utilized by the men in control, because, as we have seen, all money

There are two things I love about 1/2: the friendly (but not over-the-top) service and the German chocolates — a little pricy, but well worth it for truly decadent cocktails. My friends and I have made it a regular stop on nights out.

CITRUS AND BITTER GREENS SALAD WITH SHERRY VINAIGRETTE

With peppery bitter greens such as arugula, radicchio, frisee, endive or endive radicchio & bitter oranges packed and seasoned.

Sherry Vinaigrette: 1/4 sherry vinegar • 1/4 cup of balsamic vinegar • 1/2 olive oil • 1/4 cup sugar • 1/4 tsp salt • 1/4 tsp pepper • 1/4 cup of juice from squeezed citrus fruits
If you'd like it more tangy add some fresh lemon juice or lime juice.

Put the greens in a large bowl and scatter the fruit over them. In a small bowl mix a few drops of sherry vinegar or balsamic vinegar, salt, olive oil, and water till it's slightly跑稀. Gently toss the citrus over the salad and serve by tossing liberally with pepper, scatter the seeds over the top, drizzle with vinaigrette.

CHILI & SCALLION ROASTED RUSSETES

5 large russet potatoes • 2 1/2 scallions • 1/2 chili powder
1/2 ground coriander • 1/4 tbdsp paprika • 1/2 tbdsp dried oregano • 1/2 tbdsp cumin • 1/2 tbdsp cayenne • 1/2 tbdsp black pepper

Preheat oven to 400°. Wash and scrub potatoes until smooth. Cut each potato in half lengthwise and then cut each half into 4 long wedges making 8 wedges per potato. In a small bowl mix together the chili, chili powder, coriander, paprika and cumin. Add to a large bowl which includes the olive oil and scallions. Add potatoes to bowl and toss to coat well. Sprinkle on the chili mixture and then toss again making potatoes evenly coated. Place potatoes skin side down on a lightly-oiled baking sheet. Bake at 400° for 45 minutes until done.

KEEPING SCORE

Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart is remembered for his pure invention and harmonically balanced strings from his symphonies (open and closed) piano sonatas (in writing class at school), and chamber pieces (in writing class at school), will dominate the festival's complete 200th birthday, 27 Jan. Friday and Saturday evenings and all the days in a fitting 200th celebration from piano virtuoso Beppi Lora also will perform works by Mozart as well as Beethoven, Brahms, etc. The Mozart Festival, founded 1986, is one of the oldest with the "opera" and an expanded Pianofest chamber program, Wolfgang Mozart's 200th in 2007 and 200th anniversary by both Beethoven and Brahms, and what might be becoming part of without fail is the annual show, the New England College Faculty Chamber Music Ensemble, which is a nod to one of Mozart's trademarks.
